Sheila East has never believed in the boogeyman. Growing up, she took on the guise of somebody of scientific curiosity. This came from her father, who only believed in the sciences. She is exactly like him and has her eye on grabbing the Nobel Prize. Being a black woman, she feels that she has to hurdle several obstacles in her way. This leads her to Eric, a billionaire cowboy that finds her conviction to be refreshing. They meet at an art gallery and from there a romance begins. She sees a side of him that scares her, but then her scientific sensibility takes over. What happens when she sees the extraordinary and has no reasonable explanation for it?
