Banished from Warsaw 1944: The Plight of Children / Wypedzeni z Warszawy 1944: Losy Dzieci / Vertrieben aus Warschau 1944: Kindersschicksale

The main goal of the historical research project, "Banished from Warsaw in 1944 - the Plight of Children", is to add depth to the topic of deportations, which took place in Warsaw from August to October of 1944. No European city suffered so much during WWII as Warsaw and its inhabitants. (...) Hitler and Himmler gave the order: "Every inhabitant is to be killed." People who were still alive were forced to leave their homes. They were forced to go to the transit camp in Pruszkow, outside of Warsaw. About 200.000 people were killed, and 700.000 were driven out of the city. This research project addresses children aged 15 and younger who were banished from Warsaw. Almost all of the testimonies are being presented for the first time. We are allowing the youngest witnesses of those tragic times to tell their stories... --- "Another scene I will not forget: a couple was walking in front of us. I could almost describe them exactly. She walked with a child by the hand and he pushed a pram with a tiny baby in it. A dog, an Alsatian, walked by them. Suddenly the man fell to the ground, face down. I don't know what killed him - a shrapnel or a stray bullet. The dog immediately started to wail terribly. A German or Ukrainian quickly walked over and shot the dog. And then he took the baby out of the pram and smashed its head on the nearest wall. I saw it all. The mother raised her hands to her face, she let go of the other child. Some people, neighbours, grabbed her and managed to lead her away. I never saw her again. I don't know whether she lived or died. - Danuta Napiorkowska-Jarzebowska, age 13"
